The paper aims to consider the problems of local self-government in civil society in the form of unity of interests of a single individual with the interests of society and the state; focus on the philosophical aspects of cooperation of civil society and local authorities in the context of social and political interaction in the interests of both the individual and society in general; analyze the specific self-government areas; summarize the social aspects of the relationship and mutual influence of civil society and local self-government.

In Ukraine, there are prerequisites for the further development of the institute of local self-government and formation of civil society in Ukraine. However, we should recognize the obvious fact that in Ukrainian society the level of accounting and coordination of interests of different groups is not high enough; there is minor support of decisions taken at national level by various social categories, inconsistent implementation of the policy of civil union – all this must be in the constant attention of government. Very important in today's society is the idea of sound spiritual rebirth of national pride, nation-wide patriotism.
